

The Editor.

If an editor omits anything, he is lazy; if he speaks of anything as it is, people are mad; if he smooths down the rough places, he is bribed; if he calls things by their proper names, he is unfit for the position of an editor; if he does not furnish his readers with jokes he is stupid; if he does, he is rattle-headed, lacking stability; if he condemns the wrong, he is a good fellow, but lacks discretion; if he lets wrongs and injuries go unmentioned he is a coward; if he indulges in personalities, he is a blackguard; if he does not, his paper is dull and insipid. In short if he edits a paper properly, and sticks to truth and facts, he is a fool, and don't know how to edit a paper, half as well as his reader could.

"For what we are about to receive O, Lord, make us truly grateful!" would not work in this case, for an editor receives more—kissings—than he is truly grateful for, as alms poor devils can testify who have been there.

Meteor.

One of the most beautiful meteors that it has ever been our fortune to see passed across the sky from southwest to northeast last night about ten o'clock. At first it looked to be about the size of the full moon. It traveled much slower than is usually the case. At first its motion was regular but later seemed to go by fits and starts. A long tail was left behind it and towards the last it gave off large purple sparks and finally it flew into a hundred fragments and went out. It had much the appearance of a Roman candle, only many times larger and much more beautiful. It was some lone wanderer, that thought to run a short but brilliant course before going out forever.
